Carver High School

Hello Readers! Again we scribes are here to record the many interesting activities in which we engage. At Carver, our school year promises to be extremely interesting.

All organizations and class clubs have been organized, and have sent in to us officers and their objectives, but there will not be room enough in this week's column for the large volume of news. It will be coming later.

Our Principal and teachers have had many varied and interesting experiences this summer in graduate school. Principal Butler was at New York University; Mrs. Hale at Virginia State College; Mr. James Clay at Columbia University; Mrs. Harriet James at Hampton Institute, and Mrs. Elliott at Cornell. We too, along with them, feel refreshed after our summer travel.

News just came in that Charles O. Jeffries, honor graduate and winner of a four-year science scholarship at Virginia State College, will give a ten minute resume of his project at the Virginia State Teacher's Association meeting which will be held at Virginia Union University November 1, 2, 3. Mr. Jeffries at present is attending Virginia State College, where he is majoring in Agriculture.

Reporters say that much ground has been covered with regards to studies in all classes.

On Friday, October 5, the Student Council had its yearly election of officers. Campaign speeches were made by each candidate.

Vice-president is Jacqueline Lawing; secretary, Margaret Madison; treasurer, Donald Hart, and chaplain William Lipford. Sponsor is Mr. James Clay. Voting was by ballot.

Our N. F. A. boys' Judging Team won first place over other boys in the State on June 4. As a result, they attended the National Convention of New Farmers of America in Atlanta, Georgia. The boys who represented Virginia were McKinley Lewis, Raymond Williams, Herbert Fleshman, and Gerald Hicks. They rated 8th place in judging. Close competition was with Missouri, who rated 1st place. While there they visited the Capitol, Museum, the five Negro colleges, namely, Morehouse, Spelman, Morris Brown, Atlanta University, and Clark College. The boys were accompanied to the convention by their advisor, Mr. R. Q. Lawing, along with 27 other Virginia boys.

The Seniors held their first meeting September 19. Officers: President, Norrald Watkins; vice-president, Anniebelle Robinson; secretary, Margaret Madison; treasurer, McKinley Tanner; reporter, Warren Jones. C.; Lellie Lewis to Baltimore; Doris Fleshman to Philadelphia; McKinley Tanner to Texas, and Haywood Walker to Pine Bluff, Arkansas.

Miss Lois Finney, of Roanoke, is a new member of our faculty, and serves us in the capacity of Librarian.

Tenth grade reporters relate they are most pleased to have Mrs. Ora Smith as home-room teacher again. The officers are: President, Hiawatha Johnson; vice-president, Cosie McCoy; secretary, Serenia Christian; assistant secretary, Novella Hicks; treasurer, Algie Williams; reporters, Lorraine Fleshman and Adlean Mosley.

Hiawatha Johnson spent part of his vacation in Beckley, W. Va. Reginald Ablitt thinks Baltimore is a grand place to spend a vacation. Lottie Day is just as thrilled about her stay in Richmond, Va. Miss Elsie Mae Cardwell, who attended R. R. Moton High School in Farmville last year, and Mrs. Charles Walker, who attended Stratton High School in Beckley, W. Va., are members of the tenth grade this year. Sarah Virginia Harvey, a ninth grader, has re-joined our ranks, after attending high school in Bluefield, W. Va. last year.

TOBACCO ESTIMATE IS INCREASED

Production of all tobacco for 1951 was forecast by the Department of Agriculture this week at 2,250,000,000 pounds, nearly one per cent higher tha. the estimate a month ago and well above the 1950 yield of 2,032,000,000 pounds.

The department reported that the forecast compares with an average production over the last ten years of 1,787,000,000 pounds.

Much needed rains that fell in late August and early September improved tobacco yields, the report said. It added that the weather had been favorable for harvesting and curing the leaf.

VIRGINIA LEADS SOUTH IN FOREST FIRE CONTROL

During the calendar year 1950 some 2,110 forest fires in Virginia burned a total of 20,740 acres of forest land. This is a lot of land to be ravished by wild, uncontrolled fires, and it is greatly to be deplored. It amounts to slightly better than 32 square miles of territory over which fires have had their way. To an individual, that is a large area; and yet, when it is compared to the much greater area that was protected and kept free from fire, it begins to appear that the state of Virginia has received excellent results for the money expended in prevention and control of fires. Actually, only .14 of one per cent of the forest land in this state was burned during 1950.

Any one year can raise hob with fire control records. A bad drough, a windy day, a few careless individuals might result in several thousand acres going up in smoke. It might change an otherwise notable year of success into a disastrous one when compared to other years. Because of this the best indicator of the effectiveness of fire control efforts is to average the results for a period of five years. This tends to iron out any exceptional years of success or failure, and gives a more accurate criterion for judging results. Virginia's five year average of protected forest land burned during the period 1946-50 is .13 of one per cent.

On the basis of a report compiled by the American Forest Products Industries, Inc., Virginia has the 14th best fire control record in the nation and the 6th best for all states east of the Mississippi.
